However, if a multiple-volume book is quoted, then it is not cited as Vol. following a number in the reference list, but is written as follows: 2 Vol. (two volumes), 4 Vol. (four Volumes), etc. In this case, the parenthetical citation must include the number of the quoted volume followed by a colon and then followed by the page number without a space.

1.17 Article in a reference work (wordbook, encyclopedia, manual, lexicon)

Well-known encyclopedias and handbooks (printed and online) as well as the Bible are usually not cited in the reference list but only in the parenthetical citation. In case they are critical for the author's arguments, they should be cited in the reference list as a book with a title instead of an author (see 1.11). Dictionaries and lexicons are cited like books: if there is a single author, they are written as a book with one author (see 1.1), but if there are multiple authors or editors, then they are quoted as a book with a title instead of an author (see 1.11). In parenthetical citations, instead of specifying the page number, the abbreviation s. v. is used (lat. sub verbo – under the word) or s. vv. (lat. sub verbis – under the words) for multiple articles, and the item is written with quotation marks.

In-text citation	(Hrvatska enciklopedija, mrežno izdanje , s. v. “psaltir”)

In dictionaries and lexicons, articles or items can have separate authors. In this case, the article can be cited as part of the edited book (see 1.15).

In-text citation	(Fučić 2006, 452)

1.18 Reprint

In the reference list, the original publication date is written at the end in parenthesis with the abbreviation Orig. pub. (original publishing) and there is no period at the end of the citation. In parenthetical citations, the original publication date is not written.

Reference	Šišić, Ferdinand. 1990. Povijest Hrvata u vrijeme narodnih vladara . Ed. Branimir Donat. Zagreb: Nakladni zavod Matice hrvatske. (Orig. pub. 1925.)
In-text citation	(Šišić 1990, 127)

If the book is a first print of a historical manuscript, then it is cited the same as a reprint, but instead of using the abbreviation Orig. pub., the abbreviation Orig. ms. (original manuscript) is used. In parenthetical citations, the original publication date is not written.

Reference	Vranić, Antun. 2017. Psalmi . Ed. Danijel Berković. Zagreb: Biblijski institut. (Orig. ms. 1816.)

1.19 Unknown date of publication

If the publication date is not known, the Latin abbreviation s.a. is used (sine anno – without year).

Reference	Surname, Name. s. a. Title . Place: Publisher.
In-text citation	(Surname s. a., pg. no.)

If the publication date is not specified, but the author believes that he knows the date, it is stated in square brackets with a question mark after the date.

Reference	Surname, Name. [2013?]. Title . Place: Publisher.
In-text citation	(Prezime [godina?], pg. no.)

1.20 Place of publication

Reference	Krštenje vjernika. 2007. In: Stanko Jambrek, ed. Leksikon evanđeoskoga kršćanstva , 37-44. Zagreb: Bogoslovni institut and Prometej.
In-text citation	(Krštenje vjernika 2007, 41)

If the publisher is located in two or more places, and these places of publication are stated, only the first place should be written in the reference list. For example: Cambridge University Press is located in Cambridge, New York, Melbourne, Madrid, Cape Town, Singapore, São Paulo, Delhi, Mexico City. Hence, in reference should be written:

- Cambridge: Cambridge University Press

If there are two or more publishers located in different locations, the publishers should be written in the following order: 1st location: 1st publisher; 2nd location: 2nd publisher:

- Zagreb: Kršćanska sadašnjost; Split: Verbum.

1.21 Unknown place of publication

If the place of publication is unknown, abbreviation “s. l.” (Lat. sine loco = without the place) should be used.

- Surname, Name. Year. Title. s. l.: Publisher.

If the place of publishing is not certain but only assumed, the assumed place of publication is written in square brackets followed by a question mark.

Surname, Name. Year. Title. [Place?]: Publisher.

1.22 Unknown publisher

If the publisher is unknown, abbreviation “s. n.” (Lat. sine nomine = without the name) should be used.

- Surname, Name. Year. Title. Place: s. n.

If the publisher is unknown for certain but is assumed, the assumed publisher is written in square brackets with a question mark.

- Surname, Name. Year. Title. Place: [Publisher?].

For books printed before 1900, only the place of publication needs to be cited without the publisher. If both the place of publication and publisher are unknown, they are omitted.

1.23 Publisher

If there are more publishers from the same place, they are connected like this example:

- Matica hrvatska and Bogoslovni institut.

1.24 Electronic book (e-reader, e-book, e-library)

E-books are cited in the same way printed books are, with the type of the e-reader included at the end of the citation (Kindle, Rocket e-book, Kobo, etc.). In parenthetical citations, the chapter number (chap.) or the location (loc.) is written instead of the page number (e-readers usually have text location written on the screen). Online e-books are cited the same way printed books are including the URL address and the access date in round brackets.

Book review

Kairos publishes book reviews of the books published by Croatian or foreign publishers, published no more than two years prior, counting from the year when the book review will be published in Kairos. The length of a review should be from two to eight pages.

Although there are more ways of writing a book review every book review should contain general information, introduction, review of the work and conclusion.

1. General information: the title contains basic bibliographic information: the name and surname of the author, title and subtitle of the book, the name of the editor (if there is one), the place of publication, publisher, year of publication, and the total number of pages. Some reviews could provide the information about the price of the book and ISBN number.
2. Introduction: in the introductory part of the book review there should be presented some general information about the author, about the context and environment in which the book was written, about the type of the book according to its content and the author's intentions, and it should be specified the theme and the thesis of the book.
3. Synthetic review and evaluation of the book: this is the central and the most important part of the book review and it contains analysis, summary of the content of the book and evaluation of the book.
4. Conclusion: the reviewer summarizes his/her review of the book as a whole, points out its positive and negative sides, assesses its scientific and theological contribution and he/she recommends it or does not recommend it to the potential readers.

It is recommended that the introductory part should be about a quarter of the text, synthetic review together with the summary of the author's key ideas about two quarters of the text and the concluding evaluation of the book about a quarter of the text.
